

Kendall Stephenson

Senior Coordinator, Global Energy Institute (GEI),
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Kendall Stephenson is the senior coordinator for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's Global Energy Institute (GEI). She is responsible for GEI's meeting and event operations, including co-producing the EnergyInnovates Series, and managing communications for GEI committees.

Stephenson was born and raised in Raleigh, North Carolina, and graduated from The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with a major in political science and a double minor in history and education. While at UNC, she spent a semester abroad in London, England, where she interned at an education charity focused on encouraging youths to become informed, active, and engaged citizens. The summer before her senior year she interned in both the U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives.

Currently, Stephenson resides in D.C. where she enjoys walks on the National Mall and doing The New York Times daily mini crossword puzzle.

The mission of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's Global Energy Institute is to unify policymakers, regulators, business leaders, and the American public behind a common sense energy strategy to help keep America secure, prosperous, and clean. Through policy development, education, and advocacy, the Institute is building support for meaningful action at the local, state, national, and international levels.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce is the world's largest business federation representing the interests of more than 3 million businesses of all sizes, sectors, and regions, as well as state and local chambers and industry associations.
